

Martians Meet
Their Match!

Short Story
By
Sarah Masala

It was as cold as Pluto in a blizzard when the Mars men came to Earth. They came because they wanted to know if there was really life on Earth. They had heard stories about Earthlings, how they have two eyes and fingernails. The five men were Bob, Bub, Cheezy, Corny and Milcacarazubeeny. People just called him Goop.

When they landed, they were in Antarctica. When they got out, they explored their new surroundings. "So far no life" said Bub. He looked at his friends to see if they were listening. But all they said was "AAAAAHHH!" He looked where his friends were looking and saw a big, fat scary polar bear! The bear's eyes were freezing cold; they made the Mars men shiver. His fur glistened in the cool afternoon sun. His teeth were the scariest of all. They looked like little icicles hanging from the window sill in winter! The Mars men stepped back. The polar bear narrowed his eyes and started chasing them. The Mars men ran full speed and while they were running they imagined how it would feel if they were back home, safe and sound.

But then, they were home, because it was all a dream, an icy cold dream!

